The Big 3: Lying, Stealing and Raging

Presentation Synopsis:

Some of the most common behavioural symptoms with individuals who have an FASD, are lying, stealing and raging – “the Big 3”. In this workshop, we will discuss the neuro-behavioural aspects of why these behaviours are common and talk about strategies that can help parents and professionals get a handle on these frustrating behaviours. We will dive into other symptoms as well and strategies that promote attachment, healing and connectedness.

Bio:

Barb Clark is a parent who has made a ton of mistakes and has lived to tell. She is now passionate about sharing her mistakes with other parents and professionals to make their journey smoother than hers was. Through humor and real life experiences, she shares information about how trauma impacts children’s brains, and how to move away from consequence based strategies and instead use strategies that promote relationship and attachment building. She has a particular passion for educating others on Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders, trauma informed parenting strategies and parent support networks which she does through her position at the North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC) as well as through her work as an FASD Consultant.

Thursday February 24, 2022

8pm-9:30pm (EST)

Psychotropic Medication Algorithm & Treatment of FASD

Presentation Synopsis:

Dr. Mela and a team of 12 multidisciplinary international experts have spent over 2 years developing a FASD medication algorithm. Dr Mela will identify how the psychotropic medication algorithm can improve the quality of care for individuals with FASD. He will present a basic understanding of how to use the medication algorithm in treatment for individuals with FASD and discuss engaging in a collaborative care model to improve quality of life for individuals with FASD

Bio: Dr. Mansfield Mela (MBBS, FWACP, MSc Psych, FRCPC),

Professor, Department of Psychiatry, University of Saskatchewan, is an academic forensic psychiatrist and a Founder of the forensic subspecialty in Canada. He is also the current director of the Centre for Forensic Behavioural Science and Justice Studies at the University of Saskatchewan. As an expert, he testifies on various aspects of the interface of law and psychiatry. These include criminal and civil matters. He is an associate faculty member of the College of Law at the University of Saskatchewan and teaches medical and law undergraduate and post graduate students. He is the co-Lead of the patient-oriented research hub in forensic mental health in Saskatchewan. He is a member of the Saskatchewan Review Board and the Saskatchewan Physician Health program. He is the vice Chair of the Forensic Research Network and was a pioneer member and lead of the interdisciplinary research team of academic professionals in forensic mental health research in the University of Saskatchewan. His research focuses on psycholegal aspects of forensic mental health, with specific interests and expertise in the area of fetal alcohol spectrum disorder (FASD). He is a lead researcher with Canada FASD research network (CanFASD). His other research interests include the role of spirituality, religiosity and forgiveness in moderating criminogenic factors. He brings a clinical and patient-oriented perspective to his research questions and seeks to generate research and implement knowledge to achieve evidence-based practice amongst forensic mental health and FASD populations. Reducing victimization and improving patient outcomes especially among the vulnerable, form the foundation of his clinical and scholarly activities.

Self-harm and Harm Reduction

Presentation Synopsis:

Harm reduction is a practice used in the field of addictions and works on the premise of reducing the harms caused by drugs or alcohol on individuals and society while understanding trauma and adverse life experiences.

This model is also very useful as a strategy for supporting individuals with FASD in many areas of their lives. This presentation will explore harmful situations people with FASD may be faced with as well as self harm and suicidal ideation. We will also explore some practical strategies that support people can try, to help the individual reduce the harms and can lead to less adverse experiences for individuals with FASD through understanding their brain.

Bio:

Megan Tucker has been in the disability field for 20 years, 13 of those years working specifically with Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder. Megan graduated from Grant MacEwan as a Rehabilitation Practitioner then studied Humanities at the University of Alberta. She is currently the Training Coordinator at the Lakeland Centre for FASD, which has allowed her to speak at national and international conferences as well as train multi disciplinary professionals throughout Alberta. Megan is also a Prevention Conversation Facilitator for the Lakeland Metis Network. Megan has worked for the Lakeland Centre since 2009 in multiple capacities and has gained a wealth of knowledge about FASD. Megan's role with The Centre has changed over the years starting with creating and implementing a one of a kind Transition to Adulthood Program for Youth with FASD, which is still operating today, followed by some time as a FASD Outreach Coordinator supporting families and schools after a child or youth went through the diagnostic process. Megan sits on multiple committees to support community wellness including the Elizabeth Settlement Restorative Justice Committee and Reconciliation St. Paul. She has contributed to a grassroots anti-racism research project which recently published the book: Restoring the History of St. Paul des Metis: Understanding the Metis Perspectives.

FASD & the Criminal Justice System

Presentation Synopsis:

While we all pray that our loved one is never involved with the Criminal Justice System, sadly according to the John Howard Society of Ontario 60% percent of people with FASD over 12 years old will have been charged with, or convicted of, a crime. FASD presents many difficult challenges across the judicial system, from the initial arrest through the court, corrections and parole processes. This session provides first hand experience from the perspective of a parent who dealt with the Criminal Justice System and the methods and tools he developed that provide the best possible outcomes for dealing with the criminal justice system for people with FASD.

Bio:

John Stevens is a parent who was faced with a child who was charged under the criminal justice system. This session will share his first hand personal experience and the process he developed to provide his child with the best possible outcome.

FASD & Education-Achieving Success

Presentation Synopsis:

As you all well know, one of the most important factors for a child's success is their education. However, children with FASD commonly experience challenges in school. Having an IPRC with the proper exceptionality identification and supports defined as well as a strong IEP with the proper content is crucial to the success of the child. This session will help parents and caregivers understand how to achieve success for their child.

Bio:

Mark is the volunteer co- chair of the Hamilton and Area Parent & Caregiver FASD Support Group. He is also a member of the Hamilton Wentworth District School Board (HWDSB) Special Education Advisory Committee (SEAC). He was successful in convincing the Hamilton Wentworth District School Board (HWDSB) to recognize FASD as an exceptionality and assisting other Support Groups across Ontario to achieve the same success. Mark is often asked to participate at parent/teacher meetings to assist in a developing a collaborative approach to enhance understanding of how to support children with FASD.
